Coaching offers a significant positive impact in schools and is providing staff with highly effective, personalised CPD. That is why Switch Midlands have developed a course of coaching sessions specifically for school staff.

Led and facilitated by Switch Midlands CEO and Founder, Tim Wakefield, the support is particularly beneficial to staff with inclusion, mental health, wellbeing, pastoral, safeguarding, and behaviour responsibilities. Tim is an experienced practitioner, with qualifications in coaching and mentoring, educational leadership and SEMH, plus 15 years in the Alternative Provision sector.

Taking the form of monthly 1-to-1s across the school year, participants will be encouraged to share and reflect on their professional successes and challenges in a confidential, safe space, giving them the opportunity to work through issues and self-evaluate. This is then complemented by half-termly small group coaching sessions alongside colleagues from settings from across the region. Through this, participants will receive a range of learning resources, whilst working collaboratively with peers, exploring the complexities of their roles, collective problem solving, and sharing good practice.

All sessions are online with 1-to-1s delivered flexibly depending on individual requirements, and group coaching delivered as twilight sessions. By enrolling on the 'Switched On Schools' programme, staff will feel supported and valued, strengthening their own well-being and building skills that ultimately help to improve pupil outcomes.
